Auto Stalls on Crossing and Is Struck by An Express

WERE ON WAY TO WORK

Wife of One Victim Narrowly Escapes Fate Of Others

QUAKERTOWN, Feb. 23 (INS)—A woman and two men were killed instantly here early today when their auto was struck by a southbound Reading Railway Express train. The wife of one of the victims escaped by jumping from the car a few seconds before the crash.

The group were enroute to work when their machine stalled on Walt's Crossing here in the path of the oncoming 6.48 a. m. Bethlehem-Philadelphia express. The victims were badly mangled and the car hurled 200 feet and left a mass of twisted wreckage by the impact.

The dead: Andrew Andres, 55, a grocery clerk; his wife, Amelia, 45, a cigar maker, and Oscar Musselman, 51, also a cigar maker.

Mrs. Oscar Musselman, also a cigar firm employee, escaped death by jumping from the car just before it was struck. The others were unable to get free of the car in time.

The group had left their homes in Bucks county in a car owned by the grocery store where Andres was employed and were nearing their places of employment when the tragedy occurred. Andres was driving.

Musselman is survived by a son and his widow while Mr. and Mrs. Andres are survived by a son, George, of Bethlehem.

The bodies were taken to a local undertaking parlor to await action of the Bucks county coroner.

The express, due in Quakertown at 6.20, does not stop and was at full speed as it struck the car. The crossing is about one and one-half blocks from the Quakertown station. The train reaches Philadelphia at 7.56 a. m., going from Bethlehem.

When the bodies were removed to the railroad station to be viewed by Coroner Murphy, Mrs. Musselman collapsed.

BRISTOL HIGH TO MEET AMBLER IN LOCAL "GYM"

Lively Game Booked for Tomorrow Night on Local Floor

AMBLER WON LAST ONE

By T. M. Juno

Stiff opposition is expected tomorrow night when Bristol High School boys' basketball team meets Ambler High in the local "gym."

Several weeks ago Bristol traveled to Ambler with seven straight victories but here they were halted by the Orange and Black squad who gave them a 35-30 trimming.

Bristol, one of the leading forwards in the Suburban League of Philadelphia, is Ambler's best bet. In the first battle of the teams Bristol ran wild against the Cardinal and Gray squad and was mostly responsible for his team's victory.

Coach Townsend was rather displeased with the showing of local boys in Temple and has put the boys through hard practice for this tilt. Coach Townsend has been instructing the boys to a new kind of defense and may use this defense against Ambler. Cutting from the basket which did not seem to work against Temple was practiced with satisfactory results.

There will be a preliminary in which the Junior Varsity of Bristol High School, consisting of Buck, VanHorn, Mines, Gallagher and Raccagno, will meet the Junior Varsity of either Bensalem or Morrisville. Tap-off takes place at 8.00 p. m.

REPORT ON LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Following is the report on "Leadership Training School" submitted to the Bucks County Bankers' Association yesterday by James Gearhart, Quakertown, the young man selected by the Bucks County Farm Bureau, and sent to the summer school at State College by the bankers' association of the county. He was selected to take the course because of his character, activity in the community and his general fitness to study the subject.

By James Gearhart, Quakertown, Pa.

Mr. Chairman: The Bucks County Bankers' Association is responsible for Bucks County being represented at the Second Annual Leadership Training School, through appropriating funds for my expenses on the trip.

I will try to tell in a brief time some of the outstanding things I heard and saw when I represented Bucks County at this school at State College during the week of June 13, 1927.

The purpose of the Leadership Training School is to train boys to take the lead in Junior Club work. Also to encourage young men to stay on the farms, improve agriculture, and if possible attend the Agricultural State College.

There are some qualities needed for a good leader. This was discussed by W. R. Gordon, Assistant Professor of Rural Sociology Extension. Some of these qualifications are:

1. To have knowledge and to be able to give it to others.
2. Heredity, superior intellect, cordiality, friendliness.
3. Practical vision.
4. Courage of youth.

These qualities are obtained from the home school, church, natural environment, friends and chums; individual fitness (that is heredity); social and economical activities; literature, music and art; club and community life.

The need of Leadership is not only keen in club work, but also in education, ministry, extension work, business in marketing problems and leadership in production.

The topic of "Personal Costs and Compensation of the Leader" was discussed by Robert G. Foster, Agriculturist of Eastern States, Department of Agriculture. The cost in money is not always great, time is the main item of expense. The duties of the local leader requires time in visiting the members of the club and if a new club is started to prepare programs and entertainments so that club life is not monotonous. The rewards are not always returns in money but often the good you receive in the work.

MAN WOUNDED BY SHOT FROM GUN IS BETTER

Paul Deak Suffered Only A Slight Wound on Left Arm

WILL BE ARRESTED

Paul Deak, 27, white, employed as cook in the P. R. R. labor camp, South Bristol, who was shot by Chief of Police John J. McGuckin Tuesday night as he refused to halt when ordered to do so by the Chief, is resting comfortably in the Harriman Hospital. It is said.

Deak is suspected of attempting to steal the automobile of John Ennis, Locust street. He was caught in the car by Ennis but later escaped and ran in the rear of Jacob Schmidt's greenhouses. When he was chased into the open and refused to halt at police command a shot was fired after him and he was hit in the left arm.

The bullet made a flesh wound and came out of its own accord. None of the bones of the arm were touched and Deak's condition is good.

Warrants will be issued for Deak's arrest and he will be taken into custody as soon as his physical conditions will permit. It is believed that he may also be implicated in some of the petty thieving which has occurred here during the past few weeks. A more serious charge may be lodged against him, too, claim the police.

which may be of benefit to you later in life, also the satisfaction you have in helping the community and the boys and girls.

On Tuesday, all the meetings were held in the Horticultural Building. The outstanding topics that were discussed were: "The Land Grant Colleges," "The Experiment Stations," and "The Extension Bureau." They were discussed in a round table discussion.

The land grant colleges were started in 1860. The Pennsylvania State College was started in 1862. The State Government gave large tracts of land as agricultural schools. Nearly all states have their state agricultural colleges. They are supported by state and federal government and by private donations. The experiment stations went a step farther. They were supported by the "Hatch Act" in 1887 and several other acts later on. These experiment stations made researches on crops, researches on marketing, and researches in social activities and home economics.

There was no way in which the people could get a direct result of these researches. The Farmers' Institutes were held during the winter but that was not satisfactory. In 1914 the "Smith Lever Act" was passed which started the Extension Bureau. Each county has its extension bureau and the county agent is the head of these bureaus. He is not an agent to sell or buy but an agent where you can get advice. In most cases he is the leader of junior and senior club work.

On Tuesday morning about ten o'clock we were allowed a short intermission to see the commencement procession. Governor Fisher was there, but as it was raining and the auditorium was filled we did not stay long.

After this intermission the rest of the morning was given over to the discussion of club work. The junior club is not only a pride of the boys and girls but the community is proud; even the county and state. It gives competition and gives a chance for the boys and girls and older people to learn. It gives money which means more for you than if someone gave it to you. There are many examples where whole counties were financially benefited; for example—Jefferson County was not noted for Berkshire hogs until after pig clubs were started. Now there are more Berkshire pigs in Jefferson County than in any other county. Another example is Beaver County. The people always said they couldn't raise potatoes. After a potato club was started, more potatoes were raised than were needed for home consumption.

MANY ATTEND DEBATE IN HIGH SCHOOL HERE

Judges Render Decision In Favor of the Negative Side of Question

ARGUMENTS ARE GOOD

Cheers, rousing school songs and much applause, showed in a marked manner the excellent school spirit at Bristol High School, on the occasion of the annual debate held in the high school auditorium last evening.

Not only was the student body well represented, but the instructors, parents and friends in general turned out to listen to the two sides discuss the question: "Resolved: That the United States Should Protect the Investments of Its Citizens."

The judges declared the negative side the winner. Those in charge of the debate on this side of the question were: William Wankle, Esther Singer and Herman Silber, with Mr. Wankle taking charge of the rebuttal.

The affirmative team consisted of William Winslow, Edward Mariner and Anthony Carnvale, with the first named giving the rebuttal.

Those who attended were high in their praise of the manner in which the participants conducted themselves and the way in which they had outlined and presented their matter.

The judges were: Dr. E. J. Laing, chairman; Mrs. Frank Lehman and Mrs. James H. Brooks.

The two teams had made the tables which had been placed on the platform for their convenience, most attractive. The 12-A group, the negative side, decorated their table in colors of purple and gold; while the 12-B group, the losers, had enhanced their with red and blue.

Leslie Strumfels, president of the student body, who presided, announced the topic which had been chosen for discussion and introduced the members of the two teams.

The classmates of the debaters lustily cheered them between the speeches, and several numbers by the high school orchestra, under the direction of Fred Stephenson, added to the spirit of the occasion.

SENATOR BUCKMAN ADDRESSES BANKERS

Gives Instructive Talk on The Highway System Of The State

THANKED BY THE ASS'N

Bucks County bankers concluded their fourth annual meeting which was held here yesterday with a banquet in the Elks' Home. At the conclusion of the morning meeting adjournment was taken and the visitors were conducted on a tour of inspection of the municipal building and of the two banking houses of the Borough.

Following the banquet there was speech-making and Thomas Scott presided as the toastmaster. The first speaker introduced was Joseph R. Grundy who gave a brief outline of the early history of banking in this country and the various stages of advancement through which it has progressed. He stated that since 1922 the banking capital in Bucks County had increased 50 percent.

"While primarily Bucks County is an agricultural county yet much of our growth is owed to industry," he added. "This is the fifth most important agricultural county of the 68 in the State and our industrial turnover is approximately $40,000,000 and the payroll is about $16,000,000."

Mr. Grundy continued to dwell upon the growth and development not only of Bucks County but the nation as well, and to show the prominent part which the banks of the community had played in this development.

State Senator Clarence J. Buckman was presented and previous to discussing the topic assigned him, that of "Roads," dwelt upon the subject of banking.

"The position of banker is a confidential one," said the Senator. "And you men who occupy such positions can serve in many ways." The Senator related an actual experience which occurred following the war in Northampton Township. "Following the war," said the speaker, "a high powered salesman went through Northampton Township and bought $37,000 worth of Liberty bonds for a lot of worthless stock in a knitting machine. When these people came to me and explained what had happened and wanted to know what they could do, I asked them why they had not gone to their bankers and asked advice before selling their Liberty bonds."

The Senator discussed the question of land speculators buying up farms and dividing them into lots and in many instances selling them for $5,000 or $6,000 an acre. "You bankers can do a lot of good by discussing these things with your clients when they come to you for loans."

At this point the Senator took up his topic of "Roads." He said that there are 1,600 miles of public roads in Bucks County. "These roads are divided into three classes:

"1—County roads of which there are about 38 miles. These roads are not on the State Highway route and are condemned turnpikes or condemned toll roads.

"2—State roads of which there are 370 miles which are maintained 100 percent by the State Highway Department. These are either primary or secondary routes.

"3—Township roads of which there are 1,200 miles. These are maintained by the townships and the boroughs through which they pass."

Senator Buckman illustrated the various methods of having the different classes of roads improved and the scheme by which the county and state would aid in the cost of their construction.

Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville, spoke in a most interesting and instructive way on the subject of "Advertising."

Resolution was adopted expressing a vote of thanks to Senator Buckman for his efforts in behalf of good roads. (Continued on Page Six)

HIGHER-UPS NOT CAUGHT IN RAIDS ON "BOOZ" PLANTS

Prosecution and Commonwealth Agree in Trial Of Cases

ONE IS FINED BY COURT

Assistants Are Always Left To Operate The Plants

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 23.—Two liquor cases were before the Court Tuesday, the jury in the last case returning a sealed verdict which will be read when court convenes again today. There was no session yesterday because of the holiday observance of Washington's birthday.

Ralph Gallone and his son, James Gallone, aged 18, of near Tullytown, went on trial before Judge Ryan, charged with the possession and manufacturing of moonshine whiskey in an elaborate 5000-gallon capacity plant that was set up in a large barn two miles from Tullytown on a farm leased by Ralph Gallone from the Vanscliver Sand and Gravel Company.

In the case of James Gallone, the Court, after hearing the Commonwealth's case, directed that the boy could not be held, because of insufficient evidence produced on the part of the Commonwealth. James was simply seen coming from the direction of the buildings in which the plant was located.

A third defendant in the case is Antille Macaroni, but he did not appear in court when the case was called. He is a fugitive from justice. Macaroni was found in the building where the still was located and was caught as he fled upstairs when the officers arrived.

Ralph Gallone cannot speak English. His testimony was offered through an Italian interpreter.

Constable Andrew Thompson, of Morrisville, who conducted the raid on the farm on the Bordentown road on January 21, testified that the plant contained a 5000-gallon still in operation, 7 large vats with a total capacity of 5500 gallons of mash, a 125 horsepower boiler, pumps, stacks, 15 steel drums each containing 50 gallons of moonshine whiskey, large quantities of molasses and sugar and other equipment. It was probably the largest still ever seized in Bucks county.

Chief of Police Albert Cooper, Constable Abner Herbert, of Morrisville, who assisted in the arrest, also described the still and how James Gallone was found on the premises, and that the premises were leased by him. U. S. Prohibition Agent Herbert R. Longacre, of Philadelphia, testified that Gallone gave him the lease showing that the property was leased to the senior Gallone by the gravel company.

Walter W. Cranmer, of Philadelphia, U. S. government chemist, who tested samples of liquor and mash seized from the plant, testified that all samples contained over the legal content of alcohol and that the two samples of liquor taken were "fit for beverage purposes."

In defense, Ralph Gallone said that he had nothing to do with the operation of the still, that he sub-rented the section of the barn in which the still was located to two men he did not know. The witness said he could identify them if he saw them, but that he does not remember their names. The sub-renting lease was not produced by defense. Gallone said that he did not know that moonshine whiskey was being made in the barn on his place. The witness said he conducts a truck farm on the premises in season and has a fish market in Tullytown in the winter season.

In addressing the jury, Howard I. James, of Bristol, counsel for the defendants, argued that the "higher-ups" in this case had not been apprehended and that the missing defendant, Antille Macaroni, was the real operator of the plant. He argued that his client would not have the finances to equip such a tremendous plant as was seized by the officers in this case.

Answering the argument of defense counsel, District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, in his address to the jury, said that "what defense counsel said concerning the real offenders was true."

"The trouble in cases of this kind is that the men with the money and those behind the movement never get caught," said Mr. Eastburn. "Those men are too smart, they are too smooth. They never get into court. It is poor fellows like this that are hired by the big fellows to do the dirty work."

The jury deliberated and returned a sealed verdict.

Virgil Jackson, colored, of Crestmont, Montgomery county, who was convicted yesterday by a jury of possessing and manufacturing intoxicating liquor on a farm in Southampton township, was fined $100 and costs by Judge Ryan before Court adjourned. Jackson was arrested on December 24 when he was found seated next to a still in a kitchen on the property of his uncle, William Martin, colored. (Continued on Page Four)

UNDELIVERED MAIL

The postoffice department at Washington has been trying for years to educate the users of the mails to write legibly, address carefully and place names of streets and numbers of houses on their communications, but without appreciably reducing the number of pieces of mail matter that find their way to the dead-letter office.

While trying to impress users of the mails with the need for care in packing and addressing, the department recognizes that much of the vast tonnage of dead-letter mail might be delivered if more care were exercised by local postal employees. Sometimes it seems the civil service clerk doesn't use as much ingenuity and patience in deciphering blind addresses as he did in the days when John Wanamaker was postmaster general.

How many postal employees in the dead-letter office or in the local post offices could safely deliver to an obscure person in Oswego, Oswego county, N. Y., a letter addressed to "Horsewigger, Horsewigger county, America?" It was done under the administration of Wanamaker by a woman employee who had the happy thought that the h's and r's were superfluous.

Let it be remembered, however, that the volume of mail has multiplied many times since Wanamaker's day and that the difficulties of making deliveries have increased with it. Investigation might even disclose that the percentage of mail that reaches the dead-letter office now is smaller than ever, although troubles of the postal service keep pace with increasing population.

MAKING SCHOOL ATTRACTIVE

All efforts to inspire school children with such love of learning that they will prefer the classroom to the open spaces have proved failures. Scientifically heated and ventilated school buildings that are architectural masterpieces, are little more attractive than the old red school-houses, with airtight stoves functioning in rooms either too airtight or not airtight enough.

If school days are more popular today, it is because of playgrounds, gymnasiums, swimming pools and competitive athletics. It is a certainty they will gain in popularity if modern invention fulfills its promise to abate a nuisance which has existed within the schoolroom as far back as the memory of the oldest living citizen can span.

No boy or girl who has attended a public school but can recall the days when pupils were appointed to collect the erasers from the blackboards, carry them outdoors and there beat them vigorously together till the dust which had gathered in them floated away in dense, ashy clouds, a part of which was breathed into the lungs of the "eraser monitor."

Today the vacuum-cleaning process can be applied to the erasers, and their sediment of crayon dust extracted from them by the janitor, quickly and harmlessly.

Gradually school boards are making education safe for humanity and are at the same time striving to make it alluring. But as long as children are children, the majority of them will be like the little boy who, when asked what he did at school, replied: "Oh, I wait 'til it is out."

In the spring a young man's fancy usually turns to thoughts of a new automobile. Also in the summer, fall and winter.

SYNOPSIS

Mrs. Huntley Sheldon, in an attempt to divorce her husband, searches his apartment for a correspondent. She finds no one there but her lawyer, Leonard Gilbert, who, although he had been discussing alimony with Sheldon, protects them both by stating that he had been trying to gather evidence. Unknown to Gilbert, his secretary and fiancée, Myra Martin, had been there, and also her sister, Helene, because each believed the other to be infatuated with Sheldon. In hiding, the sisters meet and escape, but Helene forgets her handbag. They return to the apartment, to Sheldon's astonishment, with Gilbert's brief case. Myra's explanation, searches for Helene's bag.

"Well, you see, I parked the car down the street and Helene and I walked over here, and when we got in front of the door I noticed your car," Myra told Gilbert. "And I noticed that you had left the case lying on the seat." Myra soothed her conscience for the lie by salving it with the thought that it was all for the good of her sister. As a matter of fact she knew quite well that Gilbert always kept his brief cases in a side pocket of the car, and she had taken it out to use it to her own purpose and advantage.

"That's funny," Gilbert exclaimed. "I never leave that bag on the seat. I usually put it in the pocket."

"Well, it was on the seat this time," Myra answered. "I suppose you were in a hurry, and forgot it. There, she had found the bag. Her own bag she had left in her car, so detected.

"Now Huntley, you know you didn't mean it," she picked up what was obviously her bag and gloves and tucked them under her arm. "I thought I'd better bring it along," she smiled.

Botts was staring at her—she felt his eyes on her, and turned quickly. Botts, though, knowing that he had seen something not quite natural, was still so confused and chagrined that he decided that he had best say nothing now. Still, he couldn't help feeling that there was something unusual about the whole thing. But with Myra returning his stare he was forced to look away.

Myra looked around at the others. None of them seemed to have noticed anything at all.

"Well," Gilbert returned to his professional manner and looked at Mrs. Sheldon. "do you want to come back to my office this afternoon to see me about anything? And of course, Sheldon, if you want to start any kind of a suit—"

"O, I'm sure he doesn't," Mrs. Sheldon cooed.

Sheldon looked at his wife. He knew what was going to happen now. But he drew himself up and turned on his lawyer. "I've already told you what I intend doing."

"Now, Huntley, dear, you know you didn't mean it," Mrs. Sheldon went over to her husband and took his arm. "You know, after all that's happened this afternoon, I really don't think I want to divorce Huntley." She gazed appealingly at Sheldon, who was beginning to smile. Encouraged by his attitude she continued. "I've just begun to realize that it's his delightful uncertainty that keeps me amused and interested. Don't you think so, dear?" She smiled at her husband.

"Perhaps," he smiled back.

"Well, we'd better get out of this, if it's going to be a family reunion. You don't need a lawyer for that," Gilbert laughed. "Shall we part friends, Sheldon?" He held out his hand.

"Surest thing you know," Sheldon agreed heartily, and took the lawyer's proffered hand. "It's all right. I guess we'll call the whole thing off."

"And you, my dear," Mrs. Sheldon turned to Myra who was starting for the door. "I want you to come and see me some time, won't you?"

Perhaps Mr. Gilbert would bring you to dinner—you and your sister and her husband."

"Thank you, Mrs. Sheldon. That's very kind of you," Myra shook hands with Nita.

"Perhaps after I get to know you better I'll be able to think who it is you remind me of."

Sheldon winced and Myra turned pale.

"Perhaps," Myra edged nearer the door. "And may I wish you happiness on this venture?"

"Of course—and if I ever need a divorce, you'll see me in the office. Good bye."

"Good bye," Helene and Myra turned into the hallway and fled, with Gilbert following after them.

Back in the living room of the apartment Botts was staring uncertainly at his client and her husband. "Say," he frowned, "you can't make a fool out of me. I saw what—"

"Botts, I think your services are no longer necessary," Mrs. Sheldon informed him coldly.

"All right. Just as you say. Good bye." He went out, slamming the door behind him.

CHAPTER XVIII

That evening in Myra's apartment, Helene and her sister sat talking over the events of the past few days. Their relief was so great that they had decided there was nothing to do but celebrate. And so they had persuaded Ralph and Gilbert, without telling them exactly why, to help in the ceremonies.

Their evening gowns sparkled and gleamed in the soft lights. In Helene's room they could hear Ralph moving about, dressing.

"Well, for goodness sake, Myra, will you please explain to me why or how you ever got mixed up with Sheldon," Helene was demanding.

"After the way you warned me! I haven't got head nor tail of the story, yet. You've simply got to tell me, or I'll worm it out of you somehow—I'll threaten to tell Gilbert about your goings on," she laughed.

"To be frank, Helene, I wasn't going to tell you the story at all, because I didn't want to worry you," Myra began. "But after what happened this afternoon I suppose we might as well share the guilty secret. But I can't understand why you went to Sheldon's apartment."

"To protect you."

"To protect me—O, Helene, that is funny. It seems we were both playing the same hand and didn't know it. I went to protect you."

"O, Myra, please tell me your story and then I'll tell you mine. What happened after you locked me in Saturday night?"

"Well," Myra began, "you see it was this way. I didn't exactly know what to do with you—"

"I was a bad child, wasn't I, Myra?" Helene shook her head sorrowfully. "I'm so sorry."

"It's all right, Helene. It's all over now. Anyway, I thought that if I could keep you in the house that one evening I might save you for just that night. But I guessed that as soon as you did get out—and I knew I couldn't keep you locked up forever—you'd be more anxious to see Sheldon than ever before."

"And so I should have, Myra," Helene nodded approval.

"So I thought my one chance to save you would be to see Sheldon and tell him that he, himself, must be the one to give you up. I didn't want to go to him as your sister. I didn't think that would do much good, so I tried to disguise myself with old clothes and glasses and I took the car and off I went to Sheldon's lodge. You should have seen his face when I walked in the door and announced myself as a representative of the Young Girls' Welfare League."

"O, it must have been funny. And I couldn't imagine where you had gone when I got out and found that you had vanished. I was simply furious. But go on."

"Well, it seems that after talking to me for a while—O, yes, I tried to make Sheldon write you a note telling you that he never wanted to see you again, or something silly like that—he recognized me. But I didn't know that he knew. Then he pretended to have a heart attack, and I was so worried I went flying getting him medicines and all sorts of things, and he pretended to go off in a delirium—and I couldn't get any help, and every time I moved he tried to grab me, and I had to stay there all night. I went to sleep in a big chair."

"O, Myra, how awful. I should have been scared to death."

"Well, I was, too, but I didn't know what else to do. And then, when I woke up in the morning there was that Japanese servant bringing in breakfast for two, and Sheldon was out splashing around in the pool. Sheldon wasn't having any more there that night at all. He had dismissed all the servants, and was waiting for you alone."

Report On Leadership

Training School

baby beef feet. They gave a demonstration at the Springfield, Mass., farm show.

The club round up should be a place of interest not only to club members but also people of the community. Most clubs have an exhibition at the county fairs and state products shows. These give publicity and keener competition.

Judging is of great value. Many fairs now have a junior judging contest. This gives candidates for the county judging team to be sent to young farmers' week. The winning team goes to the national dairy show to judge in an interstate contest.

On Tuesday afternoon we made a trip by bus to Penn's Cave. The cave is about 1/2 of a mile in length in a limestone region. It is unlike other caves because most caves are dry.

This one has water which at some places is forty feet deep. The trip was interesting because one of the boys who came from that section pointed out the interesting places.

In the evening we played games in the judging pavilion.

On Wednesday morning we again heard discussions on certain topics.

The important were: "How Service Clubs, Business Organizations and Bankers' Associations Help Club Workers." They aid in sponsoring and making extension projects. The last topic was "The Work of the Local Leader." His work is to visit club members and encourage them.

In the afternoon we took a tour through part of Centre County. We saw several very high silos, some as high as 90 feet. At one place we stopped to see a 26 acre field of potatoes and a large field of strawberries and raspberries. This tour was very interesting and was under the supervision of the county agent of Centre County.

When we came back to the College the judging teams had come. There were about 500 boys and girls who came from all parts of the state. About 425 slept in the Armory. We leadership boys were allowed to sleep in the Watt's Dormitory. We were the first to be allowed to sleep in there that were not students. We tried to behave in such a manner that the counties we represented did not have to be ashamed of us. We did not have to go to bed at ten o'clock as the armory boys had to, so it was pretty late some nights when we went to bed. We sat together and became firm friends although we did not know each other before that time.

On Thursday, the judging contest was held. The Bucks County team placed 7th. They were Helen Briggs, Yaidley; Howard Hockman, New Galena; and George Transue, Newtown. Three classes of cows were judged: Holsteins, Jerseys and Guernseys.

On Friday morning the 23 leadership boys had to act as guides to take the 500 boys and girls on a tour around the different buildings. The afternoon was given over to games. On Saturday morning we started for home. I enjoyed everything on the whole trip. The scenery on the way out was wonderful. It was the first time I had ever seen the coal region. Coming home we came through Harrisburg and Lancaster. It was quite different scenery than on the way out.

If I would go to any college my choice would be Penn State. We were treated wonderfully well. We had wonderful meals and I don't want to forget their good ice cream. Whenever we were everyone was sociable. On Wednesday and Thursday we had vesper services which showed the spirit of the College.

Contentment by the pipe-load

EVERY load of P.A. in your pipe is a load of sunshine in your smoke-system. Why do you suppose more Prince Albert is smoked than any other brand? I'll tell you. When you open a tidy red tin and set free that P.A. aroma, you're on your way.

When you taste that first, wonderful pull on your pipe, you've arrived. Cool as the keel of a river-boat. Refreshing as a breeze on the top deck. Mellow and mild and long-burning, with a body that puts satisfaction right over the plate every time.

Take the nearest path to pipe-joy. Go get yourself a tidy red tin of good old P.A. That's all there is to this business of finding the right combination to contentment. You'll say so after that first fragrant pipe-load of this delightful tobacco.

This tin contains TWO full ounces of top-notch smoke-joy.

UNDELIVERED MAIL

The postoffice department at Washington has been trying for years to educate the users of the mails to write legibly, address carefully and place names of streets and numbers of houses on their communications, but without appreciably reducing the number of pieces of mail matter that find their way to the dead-letter office.

While trying to impress users of the mails with the need for care in packing and addressing, the department recognizes that much of the vast tonnage of dead-letter mail might be delivered if more care were exercised by local postal employees. Sometimes it seems the civil service clerk doesn't use as much ingenuity and patience in deciphering blind addresses as he did in the days when John Wanamaker was postmaster general.

How many postal employees in the dead-letter office or in the local post offices could safely deliver to an obscure person in Oswego, Oswego county, N. Y., a letter addressed to "Horsewigger, Horsewigger county, America?" It was done under the administration of Wanamaker by a woman employee who had the happy thought that the l's and r's were superfluous.

Let it be remembered, however, that the volume of mail has multiplied many times since Wanamaker's day and that the difficulties of making deliveries have increased with it. Investigation might even disclose that the percentage of mail that reaches the dead-letter office now is smaller than ever, although troubles of the postal service keep pace with increasing population.

MAKING SCHOOL ATTRACTIVE

All efforts to inspire school children with such love of learning that they will prefer the classroom to the open spaces have proved failures. Scientifically heated and ventilated school buildings that are architectural masterpieces, are little more attractive than the old red school-houses, with airtight stoves functioning in rooms either too airtight or not airtight enough.

If school days are more popular today, it is because of playgrounds, gymnasiums, swimming pools and competitive athletics. It is a certainty they will gain in popularity if modern invention fulfills its promise to abate a nuisance which has existed within the schoolroom as far back as the memory of the oldest living citizen can span.

No boy or girl who has attended a public school but can recall the days when pupils were appointed to collect the erasers from the blackboards, carry them outdoors and there beat them vigorously together till the dust which had gathered in them floated away in dense, ashy clouds, a part of which was breathed into the lungs of the "eraser monitor."

Today the vacuum-cleaning process can be applied to the erasers, and their sediment of crayon dust extracted from them by the janitor, quickly and harmlessly.

Gradually school boards are making education safe for humanity and are at the same time striving to make it alluring. But as long as children are children, the majority of them will be like the little boy who, when asked what he did at school, replied: "Oh, I wait 'til it is out."

In the spring a young man's fancy usually turns to thoughts of a new automobile. Also in the summer, fall and winter.

Report On Leadership

They give demonstrations in certain things. One that was highly successful was the Adams County Demonstration Club. They showed how to trim baby beef feet. They gave a demonstration at the Springfield, Mass., farm show.

The club round up should be a place of interest not only to club members but also people of the community. Most clubs have an exhibition at the county fairs and state products shows. These give publicity and keener competition.

Judging is of great value. Many fairs now have a junior judging contest. This gives candidates for the county judging team to be sent to young farmers' week. The winning team goes to the national dairy show to judge in an interstate contest.

On Tuesday afternoon we made a trip by bus to Penn's Cave. The cave is about 1/2 of a mile in length in a limestone region. It is unlike other caves because most caves are dry. This one has water which at some places is forty feet deep. The trip was interesting because one of the boys who came from that section pointed out the interesting places. In the evening we played games in the judging pavilion.

On Wednesday morning we again heard discussions on certain topics.

The important were: "How Service Clubs, Business Organizations and Bankers' Associations Help Club Workers." They aid in sponsoring an amusing extension project. The last topic was "The Work of the Local Leader." His work is to visit club members and encourage them.

In the afternoon we took a tour through part of Centre County. We saw several very high silos, some as high as 90 feet. At one place we stopped to see a 26 acre field of potatoes and a large field of strawberries and raspberries. This tour was very interesting and was under the supervision of the county agent of Centre County.

When we came back to the College the judging teams had come. There were about 500 boys and girls who came from all parts of the state. About 425 slept in the Armory. We leadership boys were allowed to sleep in the Watt's Dormitory. We were the first to be allowed to sleep in there that were not students. We tried to behave in such a manner that the counties we represented did not have to be ashamed of us. We did not have to go to bed at ten o'clock as the armory boys had to, so it was pretty late some nights when we went to bed. We sat together and became firm friends although we did not know each other before that time.

On Thursday, the judging contest was held. The Bucks County team placed 7th. They were Helen Briggs, Yardley; Howard Hockman, New Galena; and George Transue, Newtown. Three classes of cows were judged: Holsteins, Jerseys and Guernseys.

On Friday morning the 23 leadership boys had to act as guides to take the 500 boys and girls on a tour around the different buildings. The afternoon was given over to games. On Saturday morning we started for home. I enjoyed everything on the whole trip. The scenery on the way out was wonderful. It was the first time I had ever seen the coal region. Coming home we came through Harrisburg and Lancaster. It was quite different scenery than on the way out. If I would go to any college my choice would be Penn State. We were treated wonderfully well. We had wonderful meals and I don't want to forget their good ice cream. Whenever we were everyone was sociable. On Wednesday and Thursday we had vesper services which showed the spirit of the College.

Contentment
by the pipe-load

EVERY load of P.A. in your pipe is a load of sunshine in your smoke-system. Why do you suppose more Prince Albert is smoked than any other brand? I'll tell you. When you open a tidy red tin and set free that P.A. aroma, you're on your way.

When you taste that first, wonderful pull on your pipe, you've arrived. Cool as the keel of a river-boat. Refreshing as a breeze on the top deck. Mellow and mild and long-burning, with a body that puts satisfaction right over the plate every time.

Take the nearest path to pipe-joy. Go get yourself a tidy red tin of good old P.A. That's all there is to this business of finding the right combination to contentment. You'll say so after that first fragrant pipe-load of this delightful tobacco.

This tin contains TWO full ounces of top-notch smoke-joy.

The little fifth ward Italian will have a large crowd of boxing fans to see him in action in Philadelphia for the first time. Under a new management, Jimmy Moran, of Philadelphia, who has kept his eye on Straffe for a good while because of Straffe's hard hitting with both hands and also his speed.
